Mike Vick seemed primed to be a conquering hero. But up 10 points late in the third quarter, the Eagles received the knockout blow when the Atlanta Falcons forced Vick from the game. The final score was a 35-31 loss for Philadelphia, but the end result won't be known until Vick's status for next Sunday is revealed. {page 24}

‘Newbold’ idea rises in S. Philly

● Just south of Washington Avenue, neighborhood seeks its own identity ● Lots of change last decade has sparked debate ● Which came first: Business or revitalization? ● Intriguing question as areas become trendy

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Chef Alex Boonphaya and his Tasker Street eateries have played a part in the upturn of a neighborhood now dubbed Newbold.

When Chef Alex Boonphaya came to Philadelphia from Thailand five years ago, his chief concern in selecting a location for his next restaurant was cost.

He bought a building on the 1500 block of Tasker Street, moved upstairs and, on the street level, replaced a bulletproof-glass-divided Chinese restaurant with Thai takeout spot Circles.

“The neighborhood seemed like it had a strong potential for change, and it was close to Broad Street,” says Boonphaya, who has since opened a sit-down directly across the street that recently won a Best of Philly award.

Like Boonphaya’s restaurants, the neighborhood around him has come a long way, fast. Dubbed “Newbold,” it makes up the eastern portion of South Philly’s Point Breeze. The rebranding insulted many longtime residents, resulting in an abundance of overlapping civic groups and tension. To one of the city’s chief planners, it’s not the best way to redevelop a neighborhood.

“My initial reaction was, ‘What is Newbold?’ It’s not a name that meant anything to me. Point Breeze means something to me,” said Commerce Director Alan Greenberger. “I don’t generally like to see this stuff happen, because I think it’s probably more divisive than it needs to be.”

But civic associations insist the newer name is not about establishing a trendy real estate district.

“While it’s true that 10 years ago, no one who lived here was calling it ‘Newbold,’ few people this far from Point Breeze Ave. were calling it ‘Point Breeze,’ either,” said John Resta, president of the Newbold Neighbors Association. “I call it ‘Newbold’ because it’s more precise than the vastness of ‘Point Breeze’ or ‘South Philly.’”

ALEX WIGGLESWORTH
awigglesworth@metro.us

The name game

South Philly real estate investor and well-known bar owner John Longacre coined “Newbold” in 2003.

“The ‘renaming,’ in our case, is really limited to our civic association and some residents who choose to identify their neighborhood this way,” said Dawn Maglicco Deitch of Newbold Civic. “We didn’t ... rename public spaces or replace traditional place names or alter maps.”

▶ Greenberger

‘Rental explosion’

PHILADELPHIA. The economic recession has been a double-edged sword for many neighborhood revitalization efforts across the city. On the one side, there is the pull to wait to sell properties due to plunging values.

“I think more people are hanging onto their houses,” Greenberger said.

On the other hand, the recession has excluded many from more expensive neighborhoods they could have once afforded — especially younger renters.

“We’re seeing an explosion in the rental market where young people who might, five years ago, have seriously thought about buying property are saying, ‘We’re going to hold off,’” he said.

Protected or not, bus drivers get attacked

NYC, Houston mass transit operators protected by glass shield, allowed to use pepper spray Despite added protections, attacks up nationally

National rise

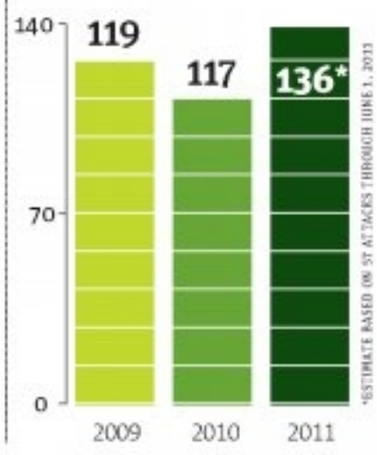
Reported attacks are up in 2011, according to the Federal Transportation Administration.



While SEPTA and elected officials are supporting new legislation as a way to stem a drastic increase in the number of assaults against operators, including several recent incidents, other cities have taken more aggressive measures to deal with the issue.

New York City already has laws to more aggressively prosecute attackers of transit operators, but has seen its number of operator assaults rise to 56 through the first seven months, compared to 46 from the same period a year ago. It is piloting a protective shield that encloses the operator.

"It's something we're piloting, and the assaults on transit employees is a concern to us," said Charles Seaton of New York's MTA, which has a fleet of approximately 6,000 buses.

Not the answer?

SEPTA Assistant General Manager Luther Diggs said the agency won't give operators pepper spray.

"All you do then is you aggravate an already bad situation," he said. But in many cases, protective shields "make things worse."

Officials with the Metro in Houston have given operators the choice to carry a pepper gel, which requires mandatory training. About 100 operators carry the gel, Metro police Capt. Michael Raney said.

"We deal with a lot of folks, and the majority of our assaults are not aggravated assaults. They're things that arise over fare disputes or someone thinking the operator passed them up the day before," Raney said.

Dictator in the dock

▶ Listen to me! Gaddafi in a more familiar setting: the United Nations.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ It could be the legal spectacle of the decade: Muammar Gaddafi on trial at the International Criminal Court ▶ If he flees the country, police are obliged to arrest him and send him to The Hague ▶ Justice served?

Muammar Gaddafi is rumored to be plotting an escape to Niger. But even if he succeeds, he'll hardly be safe. Interpol has issued a Red Alert against the Libyan dictator. If captured, Gaddafi will be turned over to the International Criminal Court in The Hague, where he faces trial on charges of crimes against humanity.

"This is the first case where the ICC has shown real clout, because its indictment is backed up by Interpol," Mo Sacirbey, a lawyer and former foreign minister of Bosnia, tells Metro. "President al-Bashir of Sudan has been indicted, too — but he's still at large because there's no Interpol involvement."

Cross-examination by international prosecutors is a humiliating prospect for Gaddafi. But it may be his best option. Other leaders, including Italy's Benito Mussolini and Liberia's Samuel Doe, were simply killed upon capture.

"You never know what might happen while Gaddafi is being captured," notes Mariam Elhadri with Lawyers for Justice in Libya. "But the Transitional National Council has been clear that it wants him arrested and put on trial."

Dictators in the docks present a juicy spectacle: Consider former Serbian leader Radovan Karadzic, who has alternatively boycotted his trial and declared it illegal. But are international war crimes tribunals counterproductive? Once a war criminal is indicted, he no longer has incentive to improve.

"In the year 2011, it's implausible to argue that a leader responsible for genocide, crimes against humanity or war crimes can negotiate his or her own freedom from justice and live happily ever after. Today the rule of law actually means something when it comes to atrocity crimes," notes David Scheffer, former President Bill Clinton's ambassador for war crimes issues, who helped create the war crimes tribunals in the Balkans, Rwanda, Sierra Leone and Cambodia.

And, says Sacirbey, Gaddafi's actions show that war criminals don't change. "The international community thought it had reformed him," he notes. "But once you've committed war crimes, you don't stop. That's why Gaddafi has reverted back to his old ways."

Trial highlights

Bosnian war crimes suspects haven't made the trial process easy:

- Radovan Karadzic: "I don't want to boycott the proceedings, but I can't take part in something that has been bad from the start. I would be a criminal if I accepted these conditions."
- Prosecutor: "Mr. Karadzic can't be permitted to manipulate the proceedings through his decision to not attend hearings. If necessary, force can be used to secure his presence in the courtroom."
- Radovan Karadzic: "I don't want to defend myself by saying that I was not important. I will defend my nation and its cause, which is just and holy. Islamic fundamentalists wanted to have Bosnia 100 percent."
- Ratko Mladic: "You're no court. Who are you? You're not allowing me to breathe!"

Tribunals

The International Criminal Court is the world's permanent criminal court for cases involving genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity. 117 countries have signed the ICC treaty, though Libya has not.

18

Since its establishment in 2002, the ICC has issued 18 arrest warrants. The ICC prosecutor is currently investigating crimes in Uganda, the DRC, CAR, Sudan, Kenya and Libya.

'HE'LL FIGHT UNTIL HE DIES'

We spoke with Mariam Elhadri, lawyer, Lawyers for Justice in Libya:

What does the ICC indictment mean for Gaddafi?
It will make it much harder for countries to give Gaddafi asylum. He's not out of reach for prosecutors. Since the ICC can't arrest people, Interpol's cooperation is extremely important. Other leaders might have negotiated in exchanged for immunity, but Gaddafi is not a negotiator. He said many times that he'll fight until he dies.

How is Lawyers for Justice in Libya assisting the ICC?
We're collecting crime evidence in every liberated city in Libya.

What are pros and cons of a Gaddafi trial at the ICC versus one in Libya?
If he's caught in Libya, the people of Libya would definitely want a trial there. Libyans view the ICC as an institution that's far away and doesn't understand the extent of Gaddafi's crimes. And it doesn't have the death penalty. On the other hand, organizing a trial against Gaddafi, while at the same time trying to rebuild the country, would be a huge task.

GOP criticizes Obama's idea to tax millionaires

Republican leaders yesterday went after President Barack Obama's proposal for a new tax on millionaires, calling it "class warfare" and predicting it will face heavy opposition in Congress.

Obama is expected to propose a "Buffett Tax" today on people making more than $1 million a year as part of his recommendations to a congressional super-committee seeking long-term deficit savings.

Paul Ryan, chairman of the House of Representatives Budget Committee, and Mitch McConnell, Senate Republican leader, said the proposal would limit growth and hurt corporate investment in an already stagnating economy.

"It adds further instability to our system [and] more uncertainty, and it punishes job creation and those people who create jobs," Ryan said on "Fox News Sunday." "Class warfare may make for good politics, but it makes for rotten economics."

McConnell said Congress had already debated the issue last year, when Obama and Republicans forged a compromise that extended the reduced tax rates for high-earners for two years.

"It's a bad thing to do in the middle of an economic downturn," McConnell said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "There is bipartisan opposition to what the president is recommending already." REUTERS

NEW YORK. Former President Bill Clinton will push corporations and nonprofit groups at his philanthropic summit this week to create jobs as the U.S. unemployment hovers at 9.1 percent and poor nations worry that the economic crisis will stall their labor growth.

More than 1,200 people — including more than 50 heads of state (such as President Barack Obama), business leaders, humanitarians and celebrities — are due to attend the seventh annual Clinton Global Initiative, which starts a three-day run tomorrow.

Gunn calls Alley's bluff

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

▶ Whatever her size, Alley looked pretty incredible on the runway at Fashion Week.

Kirstie Alley has looked nothing but great since appearing on "Dancing with the Stars." But is she really a size 4 after dropping 100 pounds, as she claims? Tim Gunn thinks not.

"There is a phenomenon out there right now that I call the lying, deceptive shell game of vanity sizing. In fact a 4 is really a 6 or an 8," Gunn said in an interview with a Tampa, Fla., radio station over the weekend.

Instead, Gunn — who served as the chief creative director for Liz Claiborne before you met him and his catchphrases on "Project Runway" — suspects that Alley is actually somewhere between a size 8 and a size 10. And that's in 2011 speak: He points out that a size 8 today is larger than ever (hence Marilyn Monroe's "size 14").

Naturally, we spent a really creepy Sunday afternoon stalking her on our photo service. The verdict? We don't know where she's buying these "size 4" dresses, but we very, very much want to find out — and hope they accept credit.

Talking points

Brad takes it back

Brad Pitt is doing damage control after he made some less-than-complimentary remarks to Parade about life with Jennifer Aniston. "It started feeling pathetic. It became very clear to me that I was intent on trying to find a movie about an interesting life, but I wasn't living an interesting life myself," Pitt told the magazine. "I think that my marriage [to Aniston] had something to do with it. Trying to pretend the marriage was something that it wasn't." But Pitt insists his comments were taken out of context. "It grieves me that this was interpreted this way," Pitt says in a statement. "Jen is an incredibly giving, loving and hilarious woman who remains my friend. It is an important relationship I value greatly. The point I was trying to make is not that Jen was dull, but that I was becoming dull to myself — and that, I am responsible for."

Good luck, Eva?

Ryan Gosling's rumored girlfriend, Eva Mendes, has a lot to live up to. "I had two of the greatest girlfriends of all time. I haven't met anybody who could top them," Gosling says of exes Sandra Bullock and Rachel McAdams, according to Hollyscoop. Plus, any relationship now takes a backseat: "There's interest, but I'm in a committed relationship with film. I'm giving as much to it as a marriage."

It's a boy for January

January Jones has given birth to a healthy baby boy, according to People magazine. Her rep confirms that the "Mad Men" star and her new son, Xander Dolan, are "doing great." Jones had said during her pregnancy that the baby's sex would be a surprise. She similarly declined to reveal the identity of Xander's father.

Bring on the Beckhams

Maybe David and Victoria Beckham aren't done having kids after all, as the soccer star hinted to Ellen DeGeneres that they'd welcome the idea of another baby. "If we were lucky enough to have another one, it would be great," he said. "We always spoke about having a big family. We love children. We are very blessed to have four healthy children; so if one comes along, that would be amazing."

3: There was some serious dirty hair in L.A. on Thursday night. Ke$ha and Alice Cooper were onstage together for reasons we're not entirely sure of, but are nonetheless grateful for.

4: Kind of hungry, kind of annoyed: Do Fashion Week front-row buddies Kate Moss and Kristen Stewart know no other expression?

5: Also spotted looking cute at BAFTA: "Modern Family" star Jesse Tyler Ferguson.

FALL TV GUIDE

Before the first cottontail and corset make appearances onscreen, "The Playboy Club" is stirring up controversy. Taking place at the Chicago home base of the infamous 1960s nightclub chain, the new NBC drama is being criticized for glorifying an institution that objectifies women.

"These girls are using so much more than [their bodies]," says actress Naturi Naughton, who likes to refer to her character, Brenda, as a "chocolate Bunny." "I mean, it's empowering because these girls are smart, they're going to school, they're buying homes ... things that women weren't able do at that time. [They're] using their resources and relying on themselves."

In truth, the iconic Bunny costumes are rather tame by today's standards, and are the most visually risque thing you'll see in the pilot. But in that first hour, brand new Bunny Maureen (Amber Heard), who captures the eye of every man in the club, finds herself in a dire situation that only "the ultimate playboy," attorney Nick Dalton (Eddie Cibrian), can rescue her from.

"Don't underestimate that character and her intelligence," Heard insists. "I think Maureen allows herself to be helped when she needs it. She by no means relies on any character, male or female, in this story — and never has."

What the series relies on is audiences buying into the escapism these clubs provided, 50 years after the fact. But nostalgia is a powerful drug.

"This is a world where you come to enjoy the music. You walk in. You feel like you're in this fantasy, and that's what it was," says Naughton. "It's like Disney World for adults, which is one of the phrases that was used. And at the end of the day, there is no Disney World without the characters and without the people [and] the roller coasters, and without all the fun things that you come for."

As long as audiences are willing to buy a ticket and take the ride.

Ups and downs

Maria Bello stars as Det. Jane Timoney in "Prime Suspect."

'Prime Suspect'

Play along with NBC's insistence that this isn't a remake of the British series starring Helen Mirren, and their star, Maria Bello, could be one of the most absorbing homicide detectives on television. To succeed, though, this cop drama has to get over the "chick in a dude's world" line that dominates the pilot — quickly.

(Premieres Thursday at 10 p.m. on NBC)

Whitney Cummings and Chris D'Elia star in "Whitney."

'Whitney'

"Whitney" has potential to be a smart commentary on modern relationships — until you meet the secondary characters. The central couple (Whitney Cummings and Chris D'Elia) has likable goofiness, sarcasm and heart. But the sloppily written caricatures that surround the duo — the bitter divorcee; the "perfect" couple — are so painfully unlikable, audiences are likely to break up with this sitcom after the first date. (Premieres Thursday at 9:30 p.m. on NBC)

Scene-stealer: Maya Rudolph, 'Up All Night'

FALL TV GUIDE

Maya Rudolph is not a childless, self-absorbed talk show host. She just plays one on TV.

"Yeah, I've got three kids, so I'm a crazy person," deadpans the former "Saturday Night Live" star, who reunites with executive producer Lorne Michaels for the new sitcom, "Up All Night." "The funny irony, really, is that I'm the one without the kid in the show."

Rudolph plays Ava, the demanding boss to Christina Applegate's new mom, Reagan (Will Arnett stars as the baby daddy). Ava's cluelessness when it comes to the reality of raising a kid spikes on Reagan's first day back to work; the boss awkwardly pleas that they party in the name of work. But Rudolph doesn't have to think back too far to remember what it was like to be perhaps over-invested in her own job. "Anything outside of New York City when you had show week was really hard to fathom because everything for me was living, breathing 'SNL' at the time," she says of her former gig. "It's funny when you think back to the person that you thought you were going to be or you hold any sort of judgment over parents," Rudolph adds, reflecting on her character and younger self. "You really don't know [what it's like to be a parent] until you have that experience."

3-D 'Lion King' reigns at the of box office this weekend

There may be a 'circle of life,' but this Disney hit just won't die

A 3-D release of animated classic "The Lion King" ruled the domestic weekend box office by trouncing virus thriller "Contagion" and three newcomers, according to studio estimates compiled by Reuters yesterday.

"The Lion King 3-D" sold a stronger-than-expected $29.3 million over three days at U.S. and Canadian theaters. Originally released in 1994, the Walt Disney Co. film is one of the top-grossing animated movies of all time.

Thriller "Contagion," about the race to stop a deadly virus as it circles the globe, finished second with $14.5 million. Third place went to action flick "Drive," starring Ryan Gosling, with $11 million. Warner Bros., a unit of Time Warner Inc., released "Contagion." "Drive" was released by FilmDistrict. REUTERS

Magical, 'Modern' night in television

63rd Primetime Emmy Awards pays homage to the wonders of the medium 'Modern Family' wins big

Television is a vast wonderland — and an especially golden one if you work on "Modern Family."

The 63rd Primetime Emmy Awards, honoring the best of the small screen, ran with the idea that television is a magical medium. The show kicked off last night with host Jane Lynch extolling — through song and dance — the wondrous virtues of TV. Wave your magical remote, she sang, and patients are cured in an hour by doctors that work once a week! Men actually enjoy cooking! Awards shows can move swiftly and be mildly entertaining!

Speaking of awards: It was a trophy-filled evening for ABC's "Modern Family." The sitcom took the first four awards of the night, including two biggies: Julie Bowen and Ty Burrell won for supporting actress/actor. "Modern Family" wins for best comedy directing and writing followed. The series also won best comedy.

There wasn't such a clear-cut drama favorite. In five major categories, five series won: "Mad Men" took best drama, while acting statues went to "Friday Night Lights"'s Kyle Chandler (lead actor), "The Good Wife"'s Julianna Margulies (lead actress), "Game of Thrones"'s Peter Dinklage (supporting actor) and "Justified"'s Margo Martindale (supporting actress). ▶ There's pressure to expand globally in our ever-smaller world, but a solid plan is still a must.

3 Tips for the ambitious entrepreneur

Looking into expanding your start-up? The more you plan, the more likely your business will survive

In an increasingly connected world, globalization is the order of the day. The concept poses both great benefits and significant challenges to entrepreneurs. However, while the benefits are many (including more efficient communication and greater potential for collaboration), today's digital age can put increased pressure on young businesses to expand globally — and to do so quickly. With that in mind, here are three tips for entrepreneurs looking to expand globally.

1 Clearly define your business model: While this may sound like a trivial task, young start-ups often have an exciting and innovative product, but no real plan for monetizing it. You need to have an actionable, scalable business model with measurable metrics in place before you expand. It's critical to establish this component of your business before thinking seriously about growth.

2 Build and foster your community: It's also important to identify and engage with your community from the beginning. In today's connected world, your community can be one of the most effective methods of spreading awareness, whether it be your company's value proposition or evangelizing your product and/or services. Building and engaging a community through online forums and e-mail lists is often a common first step. Social media channels are increasingly the norm — so further investing in community activities like meet-ups and workshops can add a face-to-face element.

3 Relocate to your new market: It's best that you personally oversee operations to ensure that they're in line with your broader business vision. Since these early individuals will be critical to the success of your business, being present and managing them firsthand will effectively establish a precedent.

A professor's novel reading list

Whether you're heading back to campus, starting a new job or entering otherwise unfamiliar territory, pick up one of these professor-recommended reads

Along with all the new freedoms of the first year of college, there are typically pangs of frustration, fear and just plain homesickness. After prodding countless English departments, we've come up with a novel list: three classic works that speak to the soul of a transitioning young adult. It's the perfect reading list for anyone that finds themselves adrift in new surroundings — whether on campus or not.

1 'Me Talk Pretty One Day'

by David Sedaris

In 27 short works, the author — made immensely popular by NPR — explores his family roots, while also noting how these memories affect his judgment in day-to-day struggles. "What our struggling freshman needs right now is a good laugh," says Rosemary Graham, professor of English at Saint Mary's College of California. "If Sedaris' hilarious account of his own struggle to adjust to a strange new world — in his case, Paris — doesn't resonate, it will surely distract and entertain, which may be even better."

2 'Invisible Man'

by Ralph Ellison

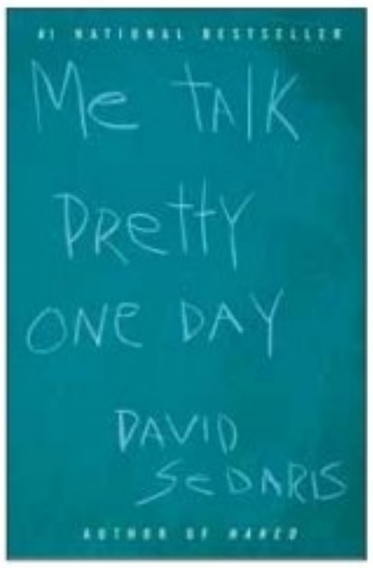
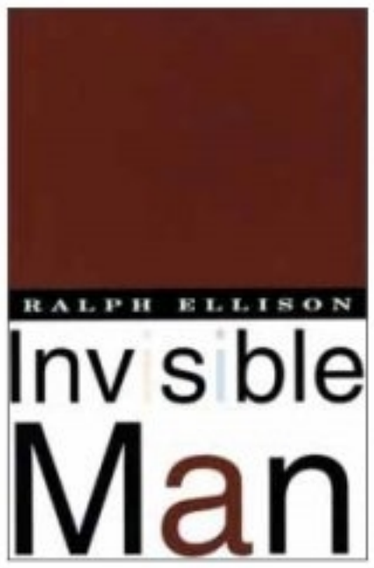
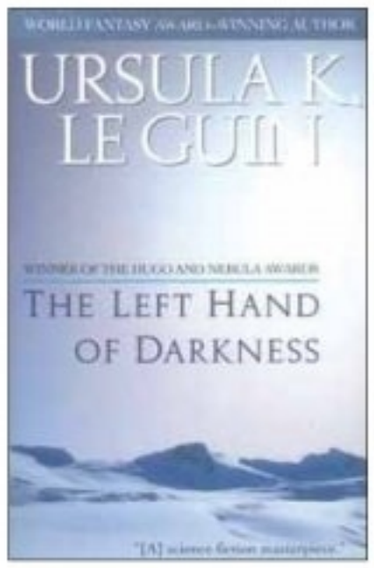
"Invisible Man" is the classic tale of a young African-American's search for identity amidst a sea of prejudices. Lars Larson, professor of English at the University of Portland, explains it this way: "Students, newly on their own and on the hunt for an identity they can live with — one that strikes a balance between independence and conformity, between maverick roughness and the sandpaper of socialization — will find an easy kinship with the nameless narrator."







WORLD FANTASY AWARD-WINNING AUTHOR
URSULA K. LE GUIN
WINNER OF THE HUGO AND NEBULA AWARDS
THE LEFT HAND OF DARKNESS
"[A] science fiction masterpiece."

3 'The Left Hand of Darkness'

by Ursula K. Le Guin

A seminal work amongst tweedy sci-fi readers, "Darkness" presents a distant future where Earth is abusing female intellectuals while a species of sexless aliens have different but equally galling prejudices. "[The protagonist's] adventures are concerned primarily with otherness," says Davis Schneiderman, professor of English at Lake Forest College. "He's someone from the outside having to quickly and carefully navigate what seems to be a daunting set of foreign customs, norms and social codes."

Protect yourself: Identity theft heads back to school

College campuses are the perfect environment for lifting personal information Why students are especially vulnerable to fraud this time of year Easy ways to lower your risk

September is an exciting time of the year for college students. But for every new club, new apartment and new study abroad application, there are forms to fill out — forms that include quite a bit of personal information. Combined with a little youthful optimism, it makes fall the prime season for student identity theft.

"College students have a giant bullseye on their back for a lot of reasons," says Mike Prusinski of identity theft prevention service LifeLock. "Organizations see them as a huge marketing opportunity, so they're getting offers for everything.

"College students have a giant bullseye on their back for a lot of reasons. ... They're in situations where personal information and mail aren't private."
MIKE PRUSINSKI

And they're in situations where personal information and mail aren't private. There's a tremendous increase in risk, and all it takes is an individual who needs money."

And as far as real-world wake-up calls, identity theft can be a particularly ugly and expensive one, with more red tape than your university's financial aid office.

"College students have this attitude that, 'Nothing can happen to me; and even if it does, my mom and dad will fix it,'" Prusinski attests. "Well, they can't — credit bureaus won't talk to your mom. And if you're a new college student, you now have a lot to do between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m."

▶ If someone has your credit card or bank account info, you're in for a hassle. But your social security number is where the real identity theft fun begins.

What you can do

Your best bet is prevention, and even Prusinski admits you don't need a service like LifeLock to protect you (although it certainly helps). Here are the basics:

1 Ask why everyone and anyone needs your info
"One thing college kids never ask is: 'Why do you need it?' But it's no different than when you go to see your doctor. You have every right to ask, 'Why do you need it, how are you storing it?'"

2 Think beyond your bank account number
"While most people are worried about someone getting ahold of their credit card or debit card, the real problem is when someone has your social security number and date of birth. If someone has your social security number, they can get a job, they can get medical care and they can file your tax returns before you even do."

When a diploma doesn't cut it: What you need to get a job

A four-year degree doesn't guarantee you a job Take it from a former professor who taught plenty of wide-eyed undergrads — before trying to land a job outside the system herself

As a former professor, Amanda Krauss knows what a college degree can do for you. But just as importantly, she knows what it can't. "Being a professor, I saw how many people came to college not knowing why they were there, with this expectation that they would somehow be given a job," she says. "Because that's the idea, right? But there isn't this correlation anymore, this neat equation of education equals job."

Krauss found this out the hard way when she left her position as a classics professor at Vanderbilt to pursue a career in technology.

She blogs about her experiences in higher ed and the outside world at WorstProfessorEver.com. We caught up with her for some tips on landing a job, with or without a diploma.

Know how to discuss coursework

There's nothing wrong with taking a varied, liberal arts-heavy courseload — but be prepared to explain how these classes translate into job skills. "There's a lot of resistance at the higher level by people who don't want to turn college into vocational school," says Krauss. "If you want to study poetry, that's fine; but make sure you know how to present that to an employer."

Join professional organizations

No matter your education level, it's important to stay current in your prospective field of employment. "Conferences and professional organizations are one of the universals of professional development," says Krauss. "It's where you learn about the most current trends in your field."

Make a portfolio

Whether you have a degree, took some classes or are self-taught, you must have something concrete that shows off your skills. "Show, not tell — that's what a portfolio is," says Krauss. "Don't say 'I took a class.'"

And then, of course, list these babies on your current, relevant résumé.

Think twice about a master's

An undergrad degree in linguistics that you don't know how to use? That's a forgivable move, and your university shares some of the murky guilt. But the old "wrong me once" adage applies to poorly thought-out master's degrees.

After leaving Vanderbilt, Krauss discovered that advanced degrees weren't always an asset when job-hunting in new fields. "An advanced degree scares people if you're not in higher ed. A lot of the time, employers think: 'Why would you want to do this?'"

The road to business school

Just applying for — never mind being accepted into — business school can be daunting Expect to attend at least one MBA fair, because you'll be surprised

The road to business school is certainly a daunting one; however, the MBA admissions process can be extremely fruitful for the committed traveler. In fact, with average MBA salaries in North America and Western Europe reaching more than $86,000, fresh graduates regularly see take-home pay in the region of three times that of fresh undergraduates. But where do you start?

For the majority of those wishing to attend business school, the road starts off with an MBA fair. Here, MBA hopefuls are able to meet with representatives from business schools based all around the world. Often, these events can help those considering enrollment to decide whether it's the right choice for them.

GETTY IMAGES

Duncan Ochieng visited the QS World MBA Tour fair in Nairobi in April 2009. At the time, he hadn't decided on whether the "whole MBA bit" was really worth the effort.

"But then I heard a representative from one of the business schools speak, and I realized that I was able to identify with what he was saying," Ochieng says. "I was able to go through the MBA fair at full throttle in order to find out as much as I could about the available schools." TOPMBA.COM

Admission tests

Prior to attending an MBA fair, it can be useful for those on their way to graduate business school to take one of the MBA admission tests, such as the GMAT or GRE. This way, they can use their score to decipher their candidacy for certain schools and bypass those where they aren't likely to gain admittance.

U.S. resident Shruti Malani ended up attending the QS World MBA Tour twice.

"It was extremely helpful to have the top MBA programs represented in one location. [That] made it easy for prospective students like me to get questions answered without individual appointments," Malani explains.

MBA scholarships

A real bonus of the QS World MBA Tour is that all attendees qualify for the $1.2 million worth of MBA scholarships it offers.

Winner of the 2011 QS Community Scholarship, Matthias Wolm, ensured that he made the most of his time during his MBA fair.

"Many attendees at a fair tend to simply collect prospectuses and ask simple questions that they could easily find out elsewhere."

"Like me, those that are close to applying to business schools when they attend an MBA fair need to plan which schools they want to speak to. Then you can research the different programs that each school offers.

B-SCHOOL APPLICATIONS:

Getting social networking right

Part of the holy grail of a good application to business school is to show why the particular nature of the school you are applying to fits with you and what you want out of your MBA.

The only way to know enough about a program is to get inside it for a while — by interacting with people who are there, visiting the campus or meeting business school representatives and alumni at MBA fairs such as the QS World MBA Tour.

Social media networking forums have created new options for doing this. You can connect with or 'follow' current students or clubs via their blogs or tweets — or find their identities on Facebook, LinkedIn, etc. If there is a Stanford club entertaining Steve Jobs, it will be on someone's blog. If Wharton students are on a trek, it'll be on YouTube. Following this assiduously and interacting politely will give you a window into the nature of the program you are targeting in a way that just was impossible to imagine a few years ago.

Expect adcoms to treat you in some ways like a potential employee or client. It's well-known that these days prospective employers or prospective clients (or anyone who wants to look you up on the Web), can and will do so.

So be smart about it. Use social networking to get inside a program to research and develop your 'perfect fit' argument. Be scrupulous about what is out there under your name, make it consistent with your application platform and try to take down unprofessional material where you can.

AVI GORDON

BEWARE

▶ The downside of social media is this: If you can find and know them in this way, then they can find you. Be careful about what you say online and what you have said. I'm not saying that admissions committees (adcoms) do an Internet search on an applicant or routinely look them up on identity sites to find out more about them or to corroborate what they put down on the forms. They probably don't. But they might.

Rick Perry is Big Oil's man

The main portion of Rick Perry's political contributions come from oil and gas companies. Do we really need another Texas oil and gas representative in the White House so soon? Maybe there's some unfinished business — like Iran? GLENN HAYES, VIA E-MAIL

Jesus a coward? Read the Bible

RE: "PACIFISTS ARE JUST COWARDS": If, as J.D. Tordoff claims, "pacifists are natural cowards," that would mean that Gandhi, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and, oh yes, Jesus Christ himself ("whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also") were all "natural cowards." RICHARD FEINBERG, VIA E-MAIL

Everyone's a big hypocrite

The Elisabeth Hasselbeck and Michael Moore feud points up a weird dichotomy in American "spiritual/political life." Elisabeth was cool with killing bin Laden, unarmed, without arrest, trial or reinstating a justice system in America; and Michael Moore is cool with killing babies in their mothers' wombs. Looks like the train has left the tracks. CHARLES MICHAEL COUCH, VIA E-MAIL

Must be sure of death sentence

RE: "ERRING ON THE SIDE OF TRAGEDY": It's happening again. Hard to believe that the state of Georgia is about to execute Troy Davis when witnesses have recanted, another person confessed to the crime and new testimony makes Davis' link to the already circumstantial evidence highly unlikely. The new evidence never got heard at trial because of legal technicalities. Cameron Todd Willingham was executed for a crime which it now appears that he didn't commit. The Georgia Board of Pardons should commute this sentence. The facts are obviously not all in. JUDY MILLER, HUNTINGDON VALLEY

The court system is known to make mistakes. If there is any doubt in your mind, please grant Troy Davis a new trial. KATRINA PATTERSON, PHILADELPHIA

At the very least, Davis should be granted a new trial and allow any new information to be introduced. To execute this man is very unjust to him, those who care about him and the honor of the officer who was killed. DAWN GILLESPIE, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Be on your toes, because something unexpected might occur that would permit you to tie two loose ends together, allowing you to pull off an otherwise impossible feat.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. A situation similar to one you recently handled successfully could repeat itself. With experience under your belt, you won't hesitate to take it on.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. If you're in need of some assistance, turn first to those you recently helped. They're likely to be the ones who make some time to assist you.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. There are indications that you might get the opportunity to merge two new projects into one major endeavor. Although they'll be unrelated, they'll complement each other well.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Instead of avoiding all challenges, you should boldly step forward and meet them head-on. Provocation serves to awaken your strongest qualities and your resolve to win.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Having multiple activities awaiting you will prove energizing, so block out your time. Having a lack of things to do could be tiring.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Take matters into your own hands if those who were delegated to do certain jobs for you aren't performing up to snuff. It will be much easier simply to do things yourself.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Although you're exceptionally perceptive, with your judgment being quite keen, you might not follow through on your shrewd instincts.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Instead of just blowing the hours away on petty issues or activities, give priority to situations that could be meaningful in material ways. Focus on things that will yield immediate returns.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. An important endeavor in which you're involved is in dire need of some effective leadership. If you believe you can fill these shoes, try them on for size and take charge.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Because your interest is quite high in multiple areas of your life, you may have difficulty choosing which facets to focus on. Pick the most challenging.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. There is an air of excitement and adventure about you that bored associates will greatly welcome. You won't be putting on any airs; what you project will be quite genuine.

KAFKA-ESQUE

Surreal game ends with Mike Kafka at QB, Eagles loss ◐ Vick leaves with concussion in third quarter ◐ Falcons score 14 unanswered to win

Wild night is calling.

The biggest storyline, Mike Vick, was knocked out of the game. His successor, Matt Ryan, did something he had never done before in his career — throw four touchdowns in a single game. And Vick's fairy-tale ending quickly turned into a beautiful nightmare.

The former face of the Falcons' franchise was supposed to put on a show and remind Atlanta what they were missing. Fans came dressed in No. 7 jerseys, expecting Vick to throw on the cape and take them for a wild ride in the time machine.

Well, they didn't quite get their wish. But they did get to see Ryan's Falcons fight their way back for a 35-31 win last night at the Georgia Dome.

Vick left the game with 3 minutes, 3 seconds left in the third quarter with a neck injury. After clanking helmets with right tackle Todd Herremans, Vick sat dazed on the Eagles sideline and Mike Kafka entered. Three plays later, Kafka handed off to LeSean McCoy for a 2-yard touchdown run to put the Eagles up, 31-21.

As the extra point sailed through the uprights, Vick limped back to the locker room with a trainer. He was greeted with a mixture of cheers and boos as he rounded the back of the end zone. Vick wouldn't return, and his future status was still uncertain at press time.

Mike Vick threw for 242 yards before leaving the game with a head injury. His replacement, Mike Kafka, finished with 72 yards on 7-of-9 passing.

With Vick out — and backup Vince Young inactive — second-year pro Kafka took the keys to Andy Reid's offense. Kafka, who was making his regular-season debut, led the Eagles on a last-gasp drive with less than five minutes to play.

But Kafka's own fairy-tale ending fell just short, when he couldn't convert a fourth-and-4. The Eagles turned the ball over on downs at their own 20-yard line, and the Falcons ran out the clock to end a crazy Sunday night in the Deep South.

Three things ...

1 The Mike Vick Experience: Before the whistle even blew, everyone was asking: What kind of reception would Vick get from the Falcons fans? Well, he was cheered wildly during warm-ups, then received mostly cheers (yes, a few boos) when he marched out to lead the Eagles' first drive. He also embraced Atlanta owner Arthur Blank and hugged Matt Ryan prior to the coin toss.

2 DeSean's hustle and flow: DeSean Jackson is under the microscope until his contract situation is resolved. He was held to two catches for 21 yards, but what the box score doesn't show is his determination. Jackson left the game in the first half with a glute injury, only to return a few plays later. He also saved a would-be touchdown by tracking down Ray Edwards on a 64-yard fumble recovery.

3 Tony, Tony, Tony: All last week the Eagles secondary had preached being physical with Tony Gonzalez. But, when it came down to it, they had no answer for the 35-year-old future Hall of Famer, who made two spectacular TD catches.

'Vick Nation' alive and well

Playoff atmosphere.

That's how several Falcons fans described the scene outside the Georgia Dome, where No. 7 jerseys were the required attire.

Whether it was Falcons red or Eagles green, Mike Vick is still somewhat of a hero in Atlanta. Jason Moody was born and raised a Falcons fan, but he'll always cheer for Vick. He listens to Philadelphia sports talk radio to keep tabs on the player he called the "ultimate weapon."

"Mike Vick is a hero down here, but for more than just his play on the football field," Moody, 40, said. "When he was here, every home game was like a party. People could relate to Vick, he was an African-American quarterback … [a] very young, very hip guy."

67

Games started by Mike Vick as a member of the Falcons from 2001-2006. He was 38-28-1. Vick also started four playoff games, with a 2-2 record.

Moody's father, Jason Sr., said he didn't care about the illegal dogfighting.

"I own dogs and I don't care about that," the 63-year-old said. METRO/MG

Bigger not better when covering wide receivers

Top cornerbacks prefer to cover physical players over smaller, speedier guys Rodgers-Cromartie may be fastest at position Room on offense?

Take offense

A growing contingent is calling for the Birds to use Rodgers-Cromartie on offense. Why?

- Track meet
  DRC ran track in college, winning top male athlete honors at the Ohio Valley Conference Championships, where he won 60-meter dash, long jump, high jump.
- Been there, done that
  He played defensive back and wide receiver at Lakewood Ranch High School.
- Return investment
  He also returned punts (six for 44 yards) at Tennessee State University.

It's the ultimate question among defensive backs: Would you rather cover a fast guy or a physical guy? Is it easier to outrace a rocket or move a mountain?

Elite corners, like the Jets' Darrelle Revis, have openly admitted they'd much rather be matched up against the bigger, bulkier target. They might be harder to jam at the line of scrimmage, but they are less likely to streak by you on a go-route.

Last year, before the AFC championship game, Pittsburgh's Mike Wallace called Revis out, saying, "I don't fear Revis." Wallace is considered the fastest receiver in the AFC.

Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie is arguably the fastest cornerback in the NFL. Early in training camp, teammate Nnamdi Asomugha called his athleticism "eye-opening."

"On defense I don't think I've played with a faster guy than Cromartie," Asomugha said.

In camp, Rodgers-Cromartie was one of the few Eagles corners — in a star-studded secondary — to keep tabs on DeSean Jackson. But covering a lightning bolt like Jackson is no easy chore, and Rodgers-Cromartie didn't flinch when asked which type of receiver is harder to cover.

"Smaller, speedy guys," Rodgers-Cromartie said. "Big physical receivers, all they want to do is try to muscle you. You can beat them with your feet. But the smaller guys, now you got to try and get your hands on them, work your feet — you got to do everything with them."

4.29
Rodgers-Cromartie's 40-yard dash time at the 2008 NFL combine, the same exact time as DeSean Jackson's best

Tennis back with a vengeance this week at Wells Fargo Center

It's hard to imagine Jim Courier feeling puny in any tennis event.

Yet, as Courier prepares for next week's Champions Shootout at the Wells Fargo Center, that's exactly how he feels. His four Grand Slam singles titles pale in comparison to the combined 30 that rivals Andre Agassi, Jimmy Connors and Pete Sampras will bring to the court.

"I'm [the] low man on the totem pole, but it's a good totem pole to be on," Courier told Metro. "Any chance I get to play with players like this, I'm going to do it."

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Courier is the captain of the U.S. Davis Cup team.

Pro Philly

Jim Courier fondly recalled playing at the Spectrum, where he won the U.S. Pro Indoor tourney in 1996.

▶ "I'm pro-Philadelphia," Courier told Metro. "Which surprises a lot of people. The city gets a bad rap for some reason, but I'm always defending it."

The Sept. 24 event is a unique format. It features two one-set semifinal matches, followed by an eight-game, pro-set finals match. Courier, Agassi, Connors and Sampras won't leave the court until a winner is crowned.

"Four players will start and one will emerge as the winner in three hours," Courier said. "It's like a hockey or basketball game."

Courier said that when organizers approached him about participating, it was an easy yes. And while admitting to having a "friendly competitiveness" with the other four guys on tour, he definitely wants to win.

"Once we all step onto the court, we want to win," he said. "We're there to go to battle."

Tickets for the Shootout are selling from $35 (upper level) to $250 (floor).

Jets rout Jaguars

Unless it involves a naked Ken Jeong flying out of the trunk of a car, a hangover is never a good thing. For the Jets on Sunday afternoon, there was no hangover at all in a 32-3 dismantling of Jacksonville.

Following last week's dramatic 27-24 win, it would've been easy to look past the Jags. No such problem.

"There's no such thing as a trap game when you didn't perform well the week before. We're trying to come out there and correct some issues we had last week," safety Jim Leonhard said. "We came out on top early and jumped on them."

High speed, high hopes at auction

Roadsters that attracted the most buzz at a British auction last week for super high-end cars didn't sell

A rare Jaguar E-type — the top jewel of an $18 million auction held last week, expected to gauge demand for classic cars as prices rise to record heights — didn't sell.

The 1963 "Semi-Lightweight" hardtop Jaguar E-Type was among 89 vehicles offered by Bonhams at the annual Goodwood Revival festival in Sussex, England. The gray E-Type, one of two road models built as variants of the 12 competition cars the factory created to take on Ferrari at Le Mans, was expected to fetch as much as 2 million pounds, or $3.16 million.

The auction came after Gooding & Co., RM Auctions and Bonhams raised $166.7 million from their Monterey events in August. The total was up from $150.2 million in 2010. A 1957 Ferrari Testa Rossa was sold by Gooding for $16.4 million, a record for any car at auction.

"Those results confirmed the market is healthy," said Dietrich Hatlapa, the founder of price database Historic Automobile Group International and the author of "Better than Gold: Investing in Historic Cars" prior to the auction Friday. "An increasing number of people are looking to buy tangible assets."

The vintage Jaguar claimed top speed of 165 mph and was made for the shipping magnate Robert Ropner. It has its original paintwork and hadn't been offered at auction before. Other highlights of the auction were a Lister-Jaguar racer that dominated the Sports Car Club of America championships of 1958 and 1959, as well as a 1964 Aston Martin DB5.

Jaguars unsold

Much of the auction's presale publicity was focused on a rare 1963 "Semi-Lightweight" hardtop Jaguar E-Type that was one of two road models built as variants of the 12 competition cars the factory created to take on Ferrari at Le Mans. Estimated to fetch as much as 2 million pounds, it failed to find a buyer.

A similar fate befell a Lister-Jaguar racer that had dominated the Sports Car Club of America championships of 1958 and 1959, valued at as much as $1.6 million.

"They were undoubtedly brilliant cars," one analyst said. "The owners' expectations were just a bit ahead of where the market was."

Car-free day urges residents to get greener

Brussels, Belgium, freed its streets of cars and heavy traffic yesterday as it celebrated its 11th annual car-free day, marking a week when cities across Europe will promote cycling and other green transport.

The seat of the European Union and home to environmental legislation for its 27 member states is encouraging efforts to cut vehicle emissions — and get citizens out on their feet.

While planners recognize that one day will not make much difference to the environment's bill of health, the event is supposed to create awareness that leads to change in the future.

But will it?

Brussels has held a car-free day each year since 2000 — but was given an F grade this year for progress in reducing "soot emissions" by the Soot-free for the Climate! campaign run by a group of German environmental and consumer associations.

▶ Will car-free days end this?

Mirroring Brussels, London, Madrid and Rome were also given failing grades. Berlin did among the best with a B, but none of the 17 cities assessed secured an A grade.

Brussels has also been dubbed the most congested European city by car navigation firm TomTom — though its blockages are nothing compared to, say, parts of China. In 2010, drivers suffered a 60-mile traffic jam on a highway from Beijing to Mongolia.

Brussels and more than 1,900 other cities will bring "alternative mobility" experts together to discuss cycling infrastructure and behavioral changes during European Mobility Week from September 16-22.

During the week, the Brussels embassy of the Netherlands will be holding Orange Bike Days, which include expos, organized rides and workshops to encourage cycling — long a part of the Dutch national identity. REUTERS
